

Application Instructions CSU PREPP (UCI PREPP)

Program Description

The Pre-Professor Program (PREPP) is designed to support the University of California, Irvine (UCI) doctoral students' and postdoctoral scholars' transition to a faculty position by engaging them in a semester-long program at a California State University (CSU) campus. The program is held virtually through Zoom. In addition, PREPP is a blueprint to support CSU's efforts to foster a pipeline for prospective new faculty. The goal of PREPP is to immerse participants in the life of a faculty member at a comprehensive master's granting institution. PREPP fellows will have individual mentorship from an experienced Faculty Mentor in three broad categories: Instruction, Understanding the Campus Culture, and Service.

We accept applications from candidates with expertise in any discipline/department represented at CSU. Visit the CSU website to determine if your area of study is represented at a CSU (<https://www.calstate.edu/attend/degrees-certificates-credentials/Pages/search-degrees.aspx>). Applicants from underrepresented groups and those who are champions of diversity are encouraged to apply.

CSU PRE-Professor Program (PREPP)

What is PREPP?

The PRE-Professor Program (PREPP) supports doctoral students and postdocs transition to faculty positions by engaging them in a semester-long program at a California State University (CSU) campus. PREPP aims to immerse participants in the life of a faculty member. PREPP Fellows are partnered with a CSU Faculty Mentor who oversees the project. Fellows will learn what faculty life is like at a comprehensive master's granting institution. Doctoral studies and postdoctoral positions prepare individuals for research and scholarship, while this program focuses on instructionally related activities (teaching, curriculum, mentoring students) and service activities associated with faculty positions. In addition, fellows meet with department chairs and other faculty members within their discipline(s) to get their perspective on faculty life, gain teaching experience, learn about how research is conducted in the CSU, learn about tenure and promotion requirements, and how to write teaching/diversity statements for applications to faculty positions.

Program Features

PREPP Fellows are partnered with a CSU Faculty Mentor who oversees the project. Fellows will learn what faculty life is like at a comprehensive master's granting institution. Doctoral studies and postdoctoral positions prepare individuals for research and scholarship, while this program focuses on instructionally related activities (teaching, curriculum, mentoring students), campus culture at a comprehensive university, and service activities associated with faculty positions. Fellows meet with department chairs and other faculty members within their discipline(s) to get their perspective on faculty life, gain teaching experience, learn about tenure and promotion requirements, and how to write teaching/diversity statements for applications to faculty positions.

Instructional Activities

Instructional activities are a broad topic that encompasses teaching and mentoring. These activities include planning for instruction, planning and teaching lessons, and mentoring students (teaching in small groups or one-on-one).

Campus Culture of a Comprehensive Master's University & Service

Fellows will learn how a campus runs and the role of a faculty member within the structure of a comprehensive university. First and foremost, Fellows need to learn about department life within their field(s). How does a department run, what is expected of new faculty, and in what role(s) do junior faculty engage? Fellows learn about what resources and support are there for research. These questions will be answered by participating in a variety of tasks and discussions. Campus service is explored later.
